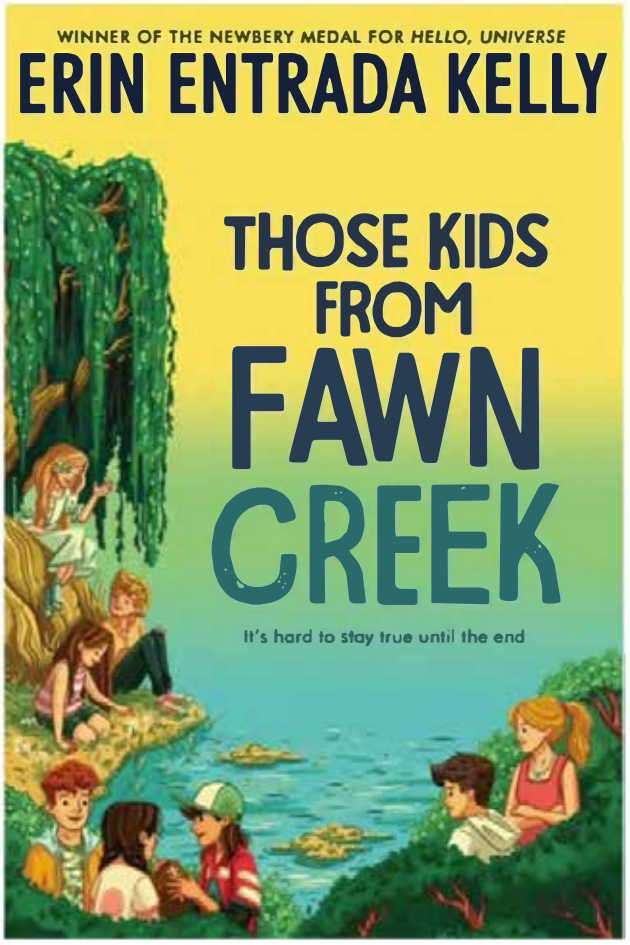
Popular Children's Author Will Meet, Greet and Sign Copies of Her New-Kid-in-Town Book

Chris Becker / Apr. 6, 2022



THIS SUNDAY AT Meyerland Performing and Visual Arts Middle School, Houston literary arts organization Inprint hosts and afternoon with Newbery Medalist and New York Times best-selling children's author Erin Entrada Kelly, who will discuss and answer questions about her new book, Those Kids from Fawn Creek.

The free event begins at 3pm and includes a book signing, giving young readers and aspiring authors a chance to meet Kelly. The event marks the in-person return of Inprint's Cool Brains! Series, which since 2007 has hosted readings by more than 40 award-winning children's book authors, including Lois Lowry, Gary Paulsen and Jon Scieszka.

Set in a small factory town in Louisiana (population 650), Those Kids from Fawn Creek tells the story of a tight-knit group of seventh graders who find their relatively tiny world rocked when New York-born new kid Orchid Mason arrives from Paris to begin the school year. As the 13th student among a dozen kids who literally grew up together, Orchid is alluring, but a bit weird, wearing bangles on her wrists and a white flower behind her ear. No one is quite sure what to make of her, or even who she should sit with in the lunchroom.

On one level, it's a story to which any kid who has had to move and start over again in a new school can relate, but Kelly expertly honors the voice of each Fawn Creek child, switching to first-person throughout, and gives readers a variety of perspectives on this stranger in their midst. Being the new kid is tough, but so is learning to accept and make friends with him or her.

The first 100 families to arrive at Sunday's event will receive a free, signed copy of Those Kids form Fawn Creek. And since April is National Poetry Month, The Inprint Poetry Buskers will also be there, ready to type out a poem on a topic chosen by attendees, on the spot and free of charge.

Dear GISH PICKS: CURATED CULTURE FOR KIDS & ADULTS reader,

If you're new here, well howdy! Welcome to my blog about Houston arts and culture, plus whatever else I wish to share from my brain. I've been publishing this since 2004 (yes, 'tis true) and I am very proud of being Houston's "cultural champion"! If you'd like to get to know me, click here.

This week's curated KID PICKS and ADULT PICKS are below -- they are my PICKS of the best and most unique arts events coming up this weekend (and sometimes beyond!). I focus on the greater Houston area, I hope you'll join me in loving local.

➡️ As you read, please note that all the words in blue are linked to websites. Click on all of them (and all of the images!) -- *you never know what you'll find. ⬅️

This Sunday, April 10 at 3pm is an IN PERSON Inprint Cool Brains! Series event featuring New York Times bestselling kids author Erin Entrada Kelly at Meyerland Performing and Visual Arts Middle School. This free and fun program for families features Erin speaking about her new novel, Those Kids from Fawn Creek, and a Q and A after her presentation. The first 100 families will get free copies of it!

The book is set in small-town Louisiana and explores themes of family, friendships, and staying true to yourself. When Orchid Mason shows up at Fawn Creek Middle School from Paris, the other kids don't know what to think of her or where she will fit in. A starred Publishers Weekly review says, "this contemporary novel, timely in themes of self-acceptance and bullying, builds on the experiences of the author's childhood to create a raw, real exploration of belonging that's also sweetly hopeful."

Kids will get to meet Erin in person and there will be a book sale and signing. The groovy Inprint Poetry Buskers will be on hand to create free poems upon request, and there will be book discounts available at Brazos Bookstore with the promo code INPRINT. Bus scholarships are available for student groups at info@inprinthouston.org.
